Dedication

We, the Class of 1958, wish to show our appreciation to Mr. A. H. Habets for giving so generously of his time and skill in taking pictures for our annual. We have called on him many times this year to take special pictures when the photographer failed us.

This he did gladly, interrupting his busy day to come over to the school at our call. Besides taking special annual pictures, he again took, as in years past, all the advertising and church pictures for the annual.

He makes no charge for his work, and develops and prints excellent pictures. We are not the only class that has benefited from him, but we have relied on him most.

Thank you, Mr. Habets.

SUPERINTENDENT DEAN LINDAHL

In a short while you, the Class of 1958, will venture forward into the world. No doubt some of you may rise to great heights of leadership, perhaps in science, in government, or in service . . . service to your God, to your community and to your country. All along the way you will be confronted with obstacles. It will take courage of the lasting kind. Many start. Few finish. Map out your life with a sense of direction, but with no thought of obstacles. Let nothing stand between you and your goal.

Our history has recorded the successes of men with objective and a sense of direction. Oblivion is for the small men overwhelmed by obstacles.

H. G. Wells once pointed out that "wealth, notoriety, place and power are no measure of success whatever. The only true measure of success is the ratio between what we might have done and what we might have been on the one hand, and the thing we have made of ourselves on the other."

V. H. S. turned out thirty men for football this year under Coaches Robertson and Crumpacker, more than any other year. Although the team was young and inexperienced, they fought hard all the way to the end. The team had nine freshmen on the squad which holds promise for next year.

The team was heavy, the line weighing over a half a ton. The last two games were the only ones that were lost by more than one touchdown. Loss of these by greater scores were caused by illness and injuries which did not heal in time to play.

Last Will and Testament

We, the Class of '58, being of sound (?) mind and not so sound body due to the untold hardships we have suffered in the past four years, leave our meager possessions to the underclassmen of V. H. S.

- I, Wayne Agee, give my hot-rod pickup with the double spotlight hook-up to Frankie Wenzel, hoping he will have as much fun rabbit hunting as I have had.
- I, Bernard Christiaens, bequeath my ability to get around the teachers to Tommy Shephard, knowing he will need it if he ever wants to make it through.
- I, Yvonne DeSmet, will my ability to cause a storm to Donna Wenzel.
- I, Bob Fourstar, leave my shyness and pleasant disposition to John Elings, who needs them more than I do.
- I, Sandra Habets, give my chair in bookkeeping to anyone who is brave enough to take it and stay in it for a whole year.
- I, Jerry Haynes, leave for Conrad as soon as I can get away.
- I, Jackie Heimbigner, leave my nickname of "floor boards" to Sylvia Johnson.
- I, Bill Jannusch, bequeath all the times my last name has been misspelled to my little brother, Allen.
- I, Clarence Johnson, leave with Sandy in hot pursuit.
- I, Ann Kay, leave my high grades and good record to the underclassmen.
- I, Jesse Kibbee, leave still looking for the belt I lost at the beginning of the year.
- I, Nona Lauffer, leave the school in better condition than when I came here as a Freshman.
- I, Ronny Lindseth, venture out to seek the higher things in life.
- I, Carol Miller, bequeath a package of gum to Arla Krattiger.
- I, Phil Miller, will my muscle-building set to Larry Stoltz.
- I, Nora Joy Osterman, depart in search of a black convertible.
- I, Jim Sheble, will my platform shoes to Mickey Stephens, as I have outgrown them.
- I, Janet Slezak, leave, but I don't know how I am going to stand being away.
- I, Sandy Snortland, bequeath my ability to stay after school for no reason but talking to Pattie Bills.
- I, Jackie Taylor, leave my better half here for another year to reap the benefits of V. H. S., but I'll be back for him, never fear.
- I, Bill Tidyman, depart saying, "High school days were mighty nice, but they can't compare with high school nights."
- I, Maurice Trafelet, leave wondering if it was worth the time.
- I, Mary Wheeler, leave to see if I can't get a job on the "Wild Bill McWilliams" program.
- I, Tony Widhalm, will my ability to throw my weight around with Frankie to anyone else who gets picked on.

To the Juniors we leave thanks to you for the wonderful times we have had together hoping you have as much fun next year.

To the Sophomores we leave our worldly manners.

To you, the Freshmen, we leave the hope that it won't be long till you are seniors, so make hay while the sun shines.

This last will and testament signed and sealed in the year of our Lord 1958 by the Class of 1958.

May 29, 1978

Dear Daryle,

Just thought I'd drop you a line and tell you that I'll be home the day after tomorrow. I have had such a wonderful time and seen so many of our old friends I thought I'd tell you all about them and what they have been doing for the past twenty years.

Do you remember Maurice Trafelet? He has opened a beauty salon in Hollywood and is doing very well. They say he has beautiful women flocking to him. Maybe he'll marry now.

Phil Miller is here. Remember how interested he used to be in flying, especially during English? Well, he is now the head of the Boeing Aircraft. You should have seen Jackie Heimbigner. Honestly, dear, her furs and jewels nearly made me turn green with envy. Phil and Jackie were married about fifteen years ago and have lovely children.

I was so glad to see Clarence and Sandy Johnson here. They are so happy with their small family. They brought their four girls along, but left their seven boys at home with the maid. Clarence was promoted. He is now the president of Yale. Sandy is teaching home Ec in the high school. She says she would go mad if she had to stay home all day, and I can see why!

Mary Wheeler McWilliams was there, but Bill was unable to come because of some troubles about the rights on his television programs. We had a fine time talking about when we were roommates.

I understand Sandra and Ronny Lindseth have been having some trouble concerning Missouri, but they appear to have it all settled now. Incidentally, Ronny is in the car business. He custom-builds hot rods and has made a mint of money.

Bernard Christiaens is doing quite well. He is the voice coach for Billy Tidyman, and they travel all over the world together. It really is a shame we couldn't see them when Bill was singing at Carnegie Hall.

Yvonne DeSmet and Jim Sheble finally got married. Jim owns the old Seven Block Ranch and half of Montana and Texas besides; so I don't think they will have any financial problems.

Remember Nona Lauffer? Well, she is now a lady hermit up at Swift Dam, where she is watching her little rocks grow. She always did believe rocks grew.

Bob Fourstar and Jerry Haynes have gone into partnership and now have the biggest shipping line in the world.

Nora Joy Osterman is a model in New York. She really is quite sleek and sophisticated.

Jesse Kibbee just successfully ran for president of South America. They say he has his own harem, but I find that hard to believe.

A marvelous discovery of uranium was made by Wayne Agee on one of his pack trips, and he now owns the controlling stock in General Motors, Ford, and Chrysler corporations.

Janet Slezak is the head of Vassar. She has obtained every degree possible. I heard that the moment she hears of something new she immediately sets out to obtain a degree in it.

Tony Widhalm finally drove Jerry Lewis out of business. I always did think Tony was much funnier.

Carol Miller is on her fourteenth trip around the world. She was left a good bit of money by her last husband. She certainly has had bad luck with husbands. I believe this is the twelfth one. Maybe the next one will have a better chance. Thirteen always was an unlucky number.

Billy Jannusch retired last week on the money he received for being the first man in outer space. He has both feet on the ground now.

Remember when Ann Kay was Peanut Queen? She just bought the state of Georgia as a peanut plantation in order to furnish the polio fund an endless supply of peanuts.

Keep the white House warm and don't forget to tuck the children in. Now that I've seen what all the others are doing, don't you think you could find something more exciting than being President of the United States?

Your loving wife,
Jackie

The Seven Block

BY BERNARD CHRISTIAENS

It was a big open country, you could ride from the present location of Conrad to Fort Benton and never see a fence.

The Seven Block Ranch, owned by W. G. Conrad and his brother Charles of Kalispell, included 200,000 acres. The Conrads took up eleven sections of land in 1886 leaving it idle until 1889. Then, hearing about this wonderful cattle country from Joe Kipp of the Old Agency, and desiring to leave Fort Benton, they began to amass the land which would eventually make up their immense acreage.

The land which the Conrads acquired was obtained in various ways. Some of the land was rented from the State Land Board. Between 30,000 and 40,000 acres was deeded land which they later purchased. This deeded land included the Evan Jones, the Dry Fork, the Bill Jones, the Miller, and Steele ranches. Another method of obtaining land was by homesteading. Young men who came to work for the Seven Block were promised a year of work and filed for homesteads, which had been carefully chosen by the ranch surveyor near the springs, water holes and along creeks. Because water was of supreme importance, whoever controlled the water controlled the land. Another means of acquisition was by the Desert Act, which offered 640 acres of land at twenty-five cents an acre to anyone who would irrigate it within three years.

Although they owned all they could buy, proved up on sheepherders' and cowboys' claims, irrigated for desert claims, and rented all that could be rented, there was still much that did not belong to them nor could they get control of it legally. Since they controlled practically all of the water and fenced it away from other cattlemen, they were the only ones who could use the land. Finally a fence was built, which according to their claim, stood on land which they owned or rented. This fence started about four miles east of Dupuyer and extended east to about where the city of Conrad is located, north and across the Marias River, which it followed up stream to near the Ryan ranch and south to the point of beginning. The first foreman of the ranch, where 25,000 sheep were raised, was Tom Curry. In 1903 the sheep were sold to a Mormon outfit for one dollar a head. Then under the direction of Tom Chamberlin, Hereford cattle from Texas were shipped in.

The Old Home Ranch was the headquarters for the crew of nine cowpunchers. The buildings were good and the food excellent. Often W. G. Conrad visited the ranch. A hail fellow well met, a U. S. Senator, he is remembered with affection and pride by all his ranch hands. Also here, were good bunkhouses and a commissary where the cowboys could purchase gloves, jackets, shirts, and overalls.

The cooking was generally done by men. Always available was excellent beef, dried fruit, and canned goods; however, in spite of the fact that thousands of cattle were raised, canned milk and oleomargarine were most generally used.

The Seven Block men were not hunters and did not take advantage of any of the bountiful game with which the ranch abounded-antelope, prairie chicken, geese, ducks, and curlews.

A constant menace, the kit fox, often gnawed saddles, boots and other possessions which contained grease.

Abandoning the wasteful practices of cattlemen, they tried to avoid losses in every possible way. Hay was cut in great quantities, and they fed some during the winter. In August 2500 calves were cut out and sent to the Putter ranch at Willow Rounds on the Marias, where they were fed and kept for a year.

If when making the rounds, a cowpuncher noticed an animal not doing well, he cut it out and took it to a hospital herd where it was fed and given extra care. A sharp lookout had to be kept over the swampy ground in the Bullhead, as the cattle were often found bogged down.

While the main headquarters were maintained at the Home Ranch, there were several line camps set out over the ranch.

A ten thousand dollar cement dipping vat was built for dipping cattle at the Hughes Ranch. Because vaccination was not very widely used, a close lookout for disease was kept by the cowpunchers. Most of the cattle were strong, but they lost some, mostly from black leg.

In summer the cattle stayed close to the creeks and water holes, but as the weather grew colder they gradually spread further from water. Great quantities of hay was cut in the Big Meadow, 20,000 acres, where Lake Francis is now located. This meadow, extending also to the west and north, originally had three lakes and was the first land irrigated by the Conrads by a canal system built from Dupuyer Creek. Under their surveyor, M. S. Darling, they also built a canal from Birch Creek to supplement their water supply. Traces of these early canals can still be seen today. Nearby a shed shelter 150 feet by 180 feet was erected.

All of the cowpunchers were the best of hands and were always having roping contests with neighboring ranches. On Bullhead Creek in 1909 a roping contest was held between the Seven Block and Big F outfits. The Seven Block was represented by Harry Rideout and an Irishman by the name of Connolly. Louis Morgan and a man by the name of McKay roped for the F outfit. The Seven Block won - 186 calves in an hour. This roping is never seen nowadays. Without the help of the Rasslers, however, this wouldn't have been possible.

During the winter of 1907, snow lay about two feet deep over most of the land and on top a crust formed strong enough to hold a horse. Although plenty of hay was ready, it was impossible to move. That year losses were great all over, and on the reservation 9,000 were skinned.

Once sixteen hundred cattle strayed across the line into Canada and were left there for two or three years, for at the annual roundup the ranch hands did not always cross the line. On one roundup with the D-K ranch, they brought back the Seven Block animals from Canada.

The animals were in excellent condition and although they had to be driven to Cut Bank for loading and arrived a worn-out lot, when they reached Chicago, they topped the market. They were so fat and well-filled that a bushel of corn could be poured on their backs and not a kernel would roll off.

At this time ranchers did not sell by the head, but by the train load. Prices varied, but the average price was $35 for a good cow. At one time before cattle could be shipped they had to be treated with Beaumont oil. A camp wagon was converted into a spraying shower bath, which the cattle were driven through. The cattle would come running out wildly with tongues hanging. The cows would refuse to take their calves, and wherever the oil dripped on the ground the grass was killed. This operation was carried on where the Miami Hutterite Colony is now located.

Many familiar faces were found on the list of men who worked on the Seven Block - Bill Derek, Harry Rideout, Pete Tavott, Chic Grimsly, Chris Ostren, Jake De Hart, Tom and Joe McKay, Harry Chambers, Carl Sparks, Curley Boucher, O. K. Speer, John Sullivan, Earl Minkler, Obe Harrison, Joe, Nick, and Tom Connolly, and Earl Aiken, the last foreman.

One hundred and twenty-five head of saddle horses and 150 head of work horses were kept on the ranch.

One of the various projects carried on was the fencing of four sections of land with a fence built of eight-foot posts with eight wires for a buffalo pasture. Charles Conrad had been raising buffalo around Kalispell and intended to move part of his herd to this ranch.

The huge creatures were hard to handle and were likely to charge and kill any horse in their way. At about this time Mr. Charles Conrad died and the project was abandoned, (Many parts of this fence can still be seen in the Bullhead.)

In 1909 the Cargills from La Crosse, Wisconsin, purchased the Seven Block together with livestock for a reputed million dollars. Earl Aiken, in charge of the last roundup, shipped 9,000 head of cattle and sold the stragglers and brand to Morgan of Browning.

Application to the State of Montana to construct an irrigation project under the Carey Act was requested by the Cargills. This complete area has been divided into smaller units of irrigated and dry land farmed by the heads of some 500 families.

The W. G. Conrad home in Helena was later sold by Harfield Conrad to the state of Montana and is presently the governor's mansion.

The present main canal system project parallels the old Conrad system outlined by M. S. Darling, whose vision of irrigation has been carried out to its present form.

This information has been gathered from Earl Aiken, farming near Williams; Mr. John L. Sullivan, Great Falls; from M. S. Darling in June 1929, from Eugene Leech in June 1929, and from J. A. Tidyman, engineer of Pondera Canal and Reservoir Co., which operates the present irrigation project.
